INMURAN.—Some small boys about town have been amusing themselves of late by torturing and killing cats. In one case an old cat was tied and the boys cut her legs and tail off, then threw her out to scramble about and die in her misery. The names of the boys are known, and there is talk of having them arrested. It would be a good plan to send such boys to jail, as such horrible cruelty is worse than stealing. Tillamook Headlight.

CHINESE ROBBERY.—A Chinaman named Sam, on a ranch a mile east of Independence, reported yesterday being robbed Thursday of $1300 in gold, which he had in his bed, and some clothing. Another Chinaman on a ranch near Salem was arrested and is in jail. The clothing was found in his cabin, but no money. After hearing before Judge Batchelor, no evidence was found against Sam and he was discharged. He is one of the Chinamen who were handled pretty roughly on the Pettyjohn place. Sometime since for resisting a tax collector.

GOES EVERYWHERE.—Owing to its low price the ONE CENT DAILY JOURNAL by mail has an unusually large circulation for a list that was started only two months ago. The mail list of the daily is entirely composed of names in addition to city and suburbs on carriers lists and the weekly JOURNAL. In all its editions not less than fifteen thousand people inspect the contents of the DAILY JOURNAL.

THE CIRCUS.—Those who witnessed the parade and attended the exhibition say the Sells and Rentfrow's circus at Salem Monday was the best that has visited Oregon for years. The seats are superior, the ring show more complete and less of objectionable features than any circus of the season. It is a very well managed affair.

WILL PROCEED.—It has been decided to go ahead with the asylum and reform school additions. The bid of J. A. Hazel $40,000 for the additions to the reform school, and of H. C. Liebe $21,344 for the two cottages and the congregated dining hall at the asylum, will be accepted and the work will proceed at once.

SURPRISES ALL.—The Lightning self-sealing, instantaneous action, and infallible fruit jar is the only one worth buying in the long run. If you have never tried it see your grocer, Clark & Eppley, Court street.

INSANE FROM COOL.—Rosa Bort of Myrtle Point was brought to the asylum today. She has a variety of real hallucinations, among them that some one is screaming in her ears.

IN THE SOUP.—There is no danger of extravagant living if you get the right ingredients for soups at J. A. Van Eaton's grocery. Vegetables, fruits and sauces a specialty.

RUNAWAY.—At 3 p. m. the cayote team of a Mr. Davis ran down Commercial street, throwing the owner out and hurrying him some. The team was captured on State street.

BIBLE STUDENTS.—Add all others interested. There is a fine line of student's and reference bibles on sale at Dearborn's, at 50c and upward.

SCHOOL FUND.—The state school board met this afternoon at the office of Clerk G. W. Davis, to consider the school fund apportionment.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—For the 6th judicial district begins next Monday at Union and lasts a week.

Of Interest to Sportsmen.

Mr. W. H. Hulbert, A. G. P. A., Union Pacific system, Portland, Ore., has just received a supply of books called "Golf Club Rules and Revised Game Laws." This publication contains a digest of the laws relating to golf in the Western states and territories. Mr. Hulbert will be glad to mail you one of the books upon receipt of two stamps to cover postage.

To Water Consumers.

The Salem Water Company has commenced to lay the new 24-inch suction pipe from the crib to their works, and as there will be quite an amount of work around the crib in repairs and putting in fresh gravel there will probably be some dirty water. Consumers should draw their drinking water before 7 a. m. while the work is being done. Office hours from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. and any complaint for bad service should be made at the office when it will receive prompt attention.

"Breakage" at Yale.

One of the popular methods of killing time among Yale students is in getting the work of the money they pay annually for breakage. Each student is subjected to an annual tax of $35 for "breakage," which is supposed to cover the loss to the corporation for accidents and damage to the furniture and fixtures of the various departments of the college. Twenty-five dollars a year from each student in the university would be an important revenue in itself were it not for the habit of the boys in making sure that they are not overcharged in this respect. Instead of there being a profit from this tax, therefore, each year generally shows a net deficit. This year the loss is greater than usual.

The favorite method of the students in "getting even with the breakage" is by illustrating their artistic abilities on whatever smooth surfaces that may happen to be at hand. These include not only the walls and doors, but the desks, tables and especially the glass fronts of bookcases and cases for specimens. On the last named diamonds are used, and the figures are cut with great care and in many instances in beautiful detail. Some of the nude figures left this year would attract a great deal of attention if they were exhibited in the art school of the college. Perfect as they are, however, they are being destroyed. Unlabeled surfaces are being put in place of those defaced wherever they may be found.—New Haven Cor. New York Press.

The Inventor of Street Cars.

The death of John Stephenson, the famous street car manufacturer, is a reminder of the short period during which street cars have been in common use. Although Mr. Stephenson secured a patent for the first street car in the year 1888, it was not until 1893 that the street car business in New York showed signs of its future development. The first street car company chartered was the New York and Harlem, which remains substantially with us to this day as the Madison Avenue road. In 1893 the Second, Third, Sixth and Eighth avenue street car companies were chartered, and a great revolution in the mode of living in New York began.

The late John Stephenson played his part modestly, but very efficiently, in the development of the street car. He had reached the hale age of 83 when the end came to him peacefully. He built up a great industry in the heart of New York city, which gives continuous employment to hundreds of men. In some communities a man like the late John Stephenson would be honored with a public funeral.—New York Evening Sun.

Wheat Land in Delaware.

Northern Delaware still has some of the best wheat lands in the country. One farmer in New Castle county reports an average of 80 bushels per acre upon 160 acres. Another reports an average of 334 bushels per acre, and another an average of 35 bushels per acre. A small field recently in asparagus yielded an average of 50 bushels per acre.—New York Sun.

Women in the Novel and the Play.

James Payn has been calling attention to the fact that in the most popular novel ever written, "Robinson Crusoe," there is not a petticoat. In Robert Louis Stevenson's books there is scarcely the rustle of a skirt, and in all his books women are subordinated to the mutual interest of man and man. The same thing is true, too, only in a less degree, in the stories of Conan Doyle. Nor does J. M. Barrie give them their accustomed place. Plainly women are going out. On the stage there are the same indications of woman's waning power to interest by virtue of her sex. In "Men and Women," the serious interest of the play lay exclusively with the men. In the "Lost Paradise," women were scarcely more important. In "Lady Windermere's Fan," despite the title, the men had the best of it. In "Colonel Carter of Cartersville" and in "Alabama," the women were scarcely more than feeders to the men—a place they have rarely been called before to fill in art.

Opera clings more closely to the traditions of the past. Yet in "Siegfried" it is only in the last act that a woman is permitted to have any voice in all that is going on. Painting could scarcely be expected to keep such rapid steps, for painting is not so dependent on human interest, and the clothing and furbelows of women furnish the painters with those opportunities that man can never offer. In the fine arts exhibition at Chicago, the notable portraits, with the exception of those of Courtois and Donce, are of men—Renoir, James Gordon Bennett, Pope Leo, Bismarck, Von Moltke. It is before these the crowds linger.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Washing a Lapland Prince.

Once a day they give Mild Bull, Jr., a bath in the Lapland village on the Midway plaisance. Mild Bull is the king of a tribe in Lapland. Mild Bull, Jr., is his son and the heir apparent to the throne. For his age, which is probably 8, Mild Bull, Jr., has learned his duties in the king business with remarkable precociousness. He is acknowledged lord of all the women of the tribe by reason of his exercise of the royal prerogative of kicking their shins.

Once a day, however, the laws of Lapland commit the heir apparent to the care of the ladies' auxiliary committee of the house of lords. That occurs by parliamentary statute at 8 o'clock in the morning, when it is decreed that "the king shall wash, long live the king!" Mild Bull, Jr., wants to be Prince of Wales all day and all night. He doesn't like any patches on his authority. Washing him is a work of time and muscle, and long ago the women abandoned the idea of laying him in a tub.

Nowadays they approach his majesty while he is enjoying his royal and imperial slumbers. Before his majesty reaches what is the matter he has been yanked out of bed, pulled into the open air and half drowned with a shower bath from a well directed hose. It takes three women to yank his majesty into the royal and imperial bathroom, which is the grass plot in front of the house, while two more point the hose at him and make quick work of his ablutions. Then the king to be arises in his might, and it takes the full strength of the company to apply a towel.—Chicago Times.

She'd a Corpse to Sell.

A day or two ago a physician of this city was sitting in his office when a respectably dressed woman entered and desired to speak with him privately. He granted the request and asked her to make known her errand. The woman after some hesitation abruptly inquired: "Doctor, what would you give for a corpse?"

The question was such an unusual one that it nuplused the physician, and for the space of a minute he was unable to make a reply. Finally he ventured to inquire whose corpse she wished to dispose of.

"Oh, I haven't the corpse yet," replied she, "but my husband, who is much older than I am—I expect him to die very soon, and I thought perhaps you might wish to purchase a subject."

"Why do you wish to dispose of his body?" asked the physician.

"Well," replied the woman, "we are not in very good circumstances, and I thought we might as well make something that way as to bury him."

The physician informed her that he was not in the corpse buying business and politely bowed her out of the office. It has since transpired that the family are not in destitute circumstances, but are of miserly instincts and that it was this characteristic that prompted the woman to make her visit to the physician.—Cedar Rapids Republican.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The population of modern Athens is only a little more than 100,000.

An Innovation For a Wedding.

The other day some one sent a question to a newspaper, asking whether it would not be a pleasing innovation to have a "musical wedding"—i. e., to have some musician of note give a half hour recital before the main business of the day was transacted. The "Answers to Correspondents" promptly sat upon the idea, but failed to hold it up to the ridicule it deserved. If there is not enough human interest left in a wedding to keep employed the mind and emotions of a presumably friendly audience, what is going to become of us?

Is the funeral ultimately to be enlivened by the popular lecture, so that people may be induced to attend it? The trouble is we get so frightened when we think of being bored ourselves or of boring other people that we lose our heads. It would be interesting to find out at just what stage of civilization people include among their divine rights that of being amused.—Kate Field's Washington.

Where Girls Do the Treating.

Not long since Mrs. Grant was buying the confectionery for a dinner at West Point. While she was in the shop some young girls accompanied by aunts came in and bought some candy, the girls paying for it, as aunts are never expected to have money. Mrs. Grant smiled on them and said, "I am buying candy for the old generals, and the pretty girls are buying it for you."—Exchange.
